

Jane Riches

Mr. Ferguson

Digital Citizenship

15 October 2009

Bibliography

Rubin, Barnett R. The Fragmentation of Afghanistan. United States: Yale University Press, 2002. Print.

Rubin's book covers the conflict in Afghanistan from 1978 to 1992. It includes information on el Quaeda. It is useful for my paper because it discusses what it's like to live in a country that is so politically and culturally divided. The extensive notes and bibliography plus the publisher being Yale University makes it a reliable resource.

Smithson, Ryan. Ghosts of War. New York: Collins, 2009. Print.

This book is a personal account of a young soldier's enlistment, training and service in the U.S. Army. His service in Iraq as an army engineer was very useful for my paper on PTSD. The author tries to be politically neutral and his personal experiences ring true. The good reviews also make it reliable as a resource.

"VA tries to help vets get disability." (2009, October 14). The Brattleboro Reformer. n.pag. ProQuest Newsstand. web. 15 October 15, 2009.

This article is important to my research of PTSD because it talks about the combat experiences of soldiers and how that affects them when they return to the United States when their term of service is done. Although there is not author, the article appears to be accurate, since it is published in an established newspaper and gives information from a variety of people.